Meeting the Needs of Their Communities

FCS institutions provide flexibility in enrollment.

Florida College System (FCS) institutions provide a range of classes and programs that fit the busy schedules of their students, who are often juggling a variety of obligations and responsibilities, including caring for dependents and working full-time. In 2015-16, 65 percent of FCS students attended part-time, while 35 percent attended full-time. These data are similar to national statistics reported in the National Center for Education Statistics’ (NCES) Digest for Education Statistics, which indicates that 62 percent of students at public two-year institutions attend part-time, compared to 38 percent full-time.
